

Folding an envelope: create your own gift packaging

Discover in this DIY how to use a circle cutter and paper to create the perfect foundation for a gift envelope. Make your gift packaging extra festive by adding homemade confetti.

Who will you surprise with this charming gift envelope?

Choose various sheets of Love-it paper and cut out 4 circles using a circle cutter. We opted for a diameter of 12 cm.

Fold the circles in half. Create a neat fold line by first scoring the paper with a cutting ruler, precisely in the middle at 6 cm.

Arrange the circles in a staggered manner, with the fold lines perpendicular to each other, forming a square. Use a pencil to mark the overlap, indicating where to glue the circles together.

Glue the circles together. To complete the envelope, you can attach a square piece of cardstock measuring 12 x 12 cm.

Grab some paper scraps and a hole punch. Use the punch to create a good amount of shapes that can serve as confetti.

Add the confetti to the envelope before folding it for an additional surprise effect.

Insert a card or gift into the envelope and fold it closed. Optionally, seal the top with adhesive to prevent the confetti from spilling out. Complete the look with a bow made of satin ribbon or bakerst-wine.

If you prefer a slightly thicker envelope, replace step 2 with this step. Determine the desired thickness, e.g., 1 cm, and score the paper using a cutting ruler at 5 and 6 cm. The short side will form the bottom. Proceed from step 3 onwards; the remaining steps remain the same.
